SPECIALTY

PORT

Going back to our roots, Port will once again reign supreme as part of the Buena Vista wine offerings.

Ports are a fortified wine that are typically richer, sweeter, heavier in body and possess a higher alcohol content than unfortified wines. This is due to the addition of distilled grape spirits that are added to halt fermentation before all the sugar is converted to alcohol and results in a wine that is usually 18% to 20% alcohol. This Tawny Port is at 18.5% alcohol.

Similar to other wines, Ports should be stored in a cool, but not cold, dark location with a steady temperature. Because Tawny Ports have already undergone oxidation, they can be consumed for up to a month after opening.

Made in the Tawny Port style, the color of our Buena Vista Port is a light, golden brown that showcases aromas and flavors of dried plums, blackberry, maple syrup, dried tobacco and a hint of light roasted coffee elements. A rich and complex fortified wine that would make the perfect pairing for many rich cheeses, desserts such as tiramisu or pecan pie, or even a delicious square of dark chocolate.

A STORY LIKE NO OTHER

Buena Vista Winery has a rich, delicious heritage as the first premium—and certainly the most colorful—of all of the wineries in California. And its founder, the self-proclaimed “Count of Buena Vista,” Agoston Haraszthy, was a vivacious and eccentric pioneer with a veritable love and unending commitment to California wine.

Surrounded by his own tales of intrigue and political exile, The Count immigrated from Europe in 1840 in pursuit of opportunity and freedom in the burgeoning American West. Following the forty-niners in search of gold in the hills of Northern California, Haraszthy sought “purple gold”—the perfect ‘terroir’ for exceptional wine. He ultimately settled in Sonoma, birthplace of California and capital of the short-lived California Republic, where he founded Buena Vista Winery in 1857.

A committed farmer, an experimental innovator and vintner, a respected author, a shrewd businessman—and a brilliant and incredibly zealous promoter, The Count is considered California’s most acclaimed and flamboyant vinicultural pioneer and evangelist.

Despite his abrupt death in 1869—in an alligator-infested river in the jungles of Nicaragua—and following the challenges of the depression, prohibition, and phylloxera-infestation—his beloved Buena Vista Winery has not only endured but also prospered.

Boisset Family Estates—a family with a true love and respect for Buena Vista—is passionately committed to continue the imaginative vision and unrivaled legacy first created by The Count 150 years ago.
